Job Details

The David Booth Conservation Department at The Museum of Modern Art is pleased to offer a 2-year David Booth Fellowship in Objects Conservation, starting September 2024. The Museum of Modern Art is committed to nurturing the next generation of conservators, curators, art historians and other arts professionals. This Conservation Fellowship is part of a distinctive museum wide fellowship program that offers opportunities for training and development through immersion in the Museum's departments, working alongside and mentored by experienced staff members. All fellows also participate in a core methods and practice program with MoMA staff and invited guests which explores object-based research and inquiry; public engagement in a museum context; and arts leadership and the role of cultural institutions.

$52,000 plus benefits and vacation, with $3,500 annually for research and travel.

Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis, with a deadline of January 21, 2024. For details and to apply please visit: MoMA Jobs.
