Abstract: The Spring 2012 issue of News in Conservation is now out and ready to be downloaded. In this issue we give you updates on the many changes and improvements we have implemented in the way our publications are accessed. In particular we bring to your attention the continuous efforts made by our editorial team to make back issues of Studies in Conservation and Reviews in Conservation as well as congress preprints more easily searchable online. In this issue you will also read about NiC's visit to the BT Archives in London, where we had a chat with the Siân Wynn-Jones, Heritage Collections Manager and Scott Barlow, Archivist. In the second of our long features you will learn about the work of INCCA and their collaborative approaches in the conservation of contemporary art.
